

Journalists Use Meaningful Quotes

In journalism even if you have an amazing article, without a quote the reader will doubt you and want a clarifying quote by someone else. After conducting an interview, hook the reader with the person's exact words. People want to listen to other's opinion.

- The first step is to find a powerful quote using an interview (tip: find the quote that matches what you're talking about the most)
- Find a space in the article where the quote you chose fits best.
- Insert the quote and don't forget "Quotation marks"
- The last step is to add a little information about the person who said the quote and add a label.

Great Finished Product: "My favorite theme park is Disneyland," 7 year old Kaitlyn reports.

Not so Great Finished Product: Hi my name is Kaitlyn and my favorite theme park is Disneyland.
