Due to the fear of coronavirus, a new deadly pandemic, many people are trying to stock up on masks, but failed to do so. This fear is growing and making buying the masks a bigger challenge, because now every 1 in 800 people have COVID-19. Most people decide to keep everything to their own family if it is essential, but Gen Qu, the person that has helped people the most, decided to help giveaway hundreds, possibly thousands, of Caring, responsible, and diligent are all words that describe Gen Qu. Born in Wuhan China, in 1971, he is the older one of his brother and himself, and traveled to America. He got Married in the U.S. and had 2 sons, named Zion and Samuel.

hand out the masks, Gen went to people and asked, "How many masks do you need? This helpful man put the masks in small bags and reported, "I delivered them to people according to their need, age, and the number of people in the household." Mr.Qu had to prepare and organize the masks before delivering them. He claims that he had to do a lot of calling to ask if people wanted them or not and how they wanted them delivered. He said it was important to be cautious delivering them because anything could have coronavirus.

> Although he could have kept many masks for his own family, he shared them. Keeping them would have been reasonable considering the fact that it was challenging to get masks in America, but he still gave them away. Gen Qu has made a difference in these hardships.

Today, he lives in Irvine, California, while his family still lives in Wuhan, China, his home city. His
